Dr. Gregory "Greg" Howes is a valued member of Webster University's business faculty and has been teaching for us since 2005. In addition to the capstone course for the MBA program, he teaches courses in Operations & Project Management and Management & Strategy.

Dr. Howes is the director for the Global Program office for Harris

CapRock Communications. His focus is on leading the Global Program Management Office, managing the profit and loss of the large and strategic customers of Harris CapRock, and improving program management processes through the organization.

Dr. Howes has a very broad technical, business and operations background with thirty years experience in the commercial, intelligence, and defense industry.

"One of the hallmarks of Webster University," according to Senior Director, Debbie Yannotti, "is the outstanding faculty, who not only hold advanced degrees, but who have vast and impressive business experience and expertise."

Dr. Howes did his undergraduate work in Computer Science at Barry University. His MBA was awarded by Florida Tech, and his Doctor of Management is from the University of Phoenix. In addition, he is certified as a Project Management Professional. He is also a member of the Old Crows and the Armed Forces Communications & Electronics Association.

Any Webster student who has had the privilege of taking one of Dr. Howes' classes can assure you that "Greg" is a great communicator, a true expert in his field, and someone who believes that "experience is the best teacher" as you can tell by his attached article.
